There are an estimated 2,500 homeless youth in Minnesota each year.
Homeless youth are hugely diverse.
Meet Serena.

Serena’s 4-year homelessness journey began when her mother learned that she is a lesbian. Serena’s sexuality proved too difficult for her mother to understand or accept...

Meet Tara.

Tara became homeless when her family lost their home this year. They moved in with another family, but there wasn’t enough room. Being the oldest, Tara moved out to be on her own...

Youth who are homeless have little control over what happens to them.

They are in the midst of their own individual journeys: past trauma, present struggles, and hopes for the future.

They want to love and be loved.
How do providers meet the diverse needs of these youth on their journey out of homelessness?
OBF Youth Homeless Initiative

• Otto Bremer Foundation’s Youth Homelessness Initiative has provided grants to six organizations over three years

• Goal is to improve outcomes in individual organizations and at the systems level
• Three emergency shelters
• Two drop-in centers
• One street outreach collaborative
• Two counties in the Twin Cities metro
Underlying belief

Collaboration leads to better outcomes for homeless youth
• How do we want to collaborate?
• To what end?
• In what ways?
• And how can evaluation help us do this?
Why developmental evaluation?

Because although there was intent to collaborate, they didn’t have a common understanding about how the collaborative process would unfold or to what end
Why principles focused?

Because guiding principles would give those providing services to homeless youth a basis for how to engage while allowing for adaptation in each context.
Principles

- Strengths-based Approach
- Positive Youth Development
- Trauma Informed Care
- Harm Reduction
Principles

• Non-judgmental Engagement
• Trusting Youth-Adult Relationships
• Holistic Approach
• Collaboration
• Journey Orientation
Questions

Would homeless young people also identify these principles as important?

What do these principles look like in practice?

Are there principles that have not been identified or articulated?

What is the impact of these principles on a young person’s trajectory when homeless?
Methods

Considerations:

• Understand phenomena through the meanings that people assign to them
• Focus on the full complexity of human sense making as the situation emerges
• Allow for multiple and sometimes conflicting perspectives
Case Studies

Youth Demographics

Gender: 9 Female, 5 Male

Age first independently homeless: 13-19 years old

Current age: 19-23

Race: African American (9), Multiple (3), Caucasian (1)

Foster care: 9 youth/ 65%

Juvenile justice: 8 youth/ 57%

Pregnant or parenting: 5 youth/ 36%

Sexual exploitation: 6 youth/ 43%
Reflective Practice Group

December 2012: Selected sample

January 2013: Reviewed and made modifications to interview protocol

February 2013: Review a rough transcript and coded for evidence of principles

March 2013: Reviewed a completed case study and coded for evidence of principles
April 2013: Teams of 3-4 people read three case studies and conducted a cross-case analysis

May 2013: Group members reviewed the write-up of the first principle

June 2013: Everyone read all of the principle briefs and we discussed interrelationships between principles

July 2013: Presentation of final results and discussion
Question 1: How do homeless youth actually experience the principles?

Trusting Youth/Adult Relationships

True caring by staff is profoundly important to youth.
And you be like, “Okay, I have all this on my plate. I have to dig in and look into [the choices I’m making] to make my life more complete.” And I felt that on my own, I really couldn’t. Not even the strongest person on God’s green Earth can do it. I couldn’t do it. So I ended up reaching out to [the youth shelter], and they opened their arms. They were like just, “Come. Just get here,” and they got me back on track.

-Pearl
If I was to sit in a room and think about, like, everything that happened to me or I’ve been through, I’ll get to cryin’ and feelin’ like I don’t wanna be on Earth anymore—like I wanted to die. When I talk to somebody about it, it makes me feel better. The people I talk to about it give me good advice. They tell me how much they like me and how [good] I’m doin’. They just put good stuff in my head, and then I think about it and realize I am a good person and everything’s gonna work out better.

-Maria
[Rahim’s] not going to send me to the next man, put me onto the next person’s caseload. He just always took care of me.[...]I honestly feel like if I didn’t have Rahim in my corner, I would have been doing a whole bunch of dumb shit. I would have been right back at square one. I probably would have spent more time in jail than I did. I just felt like if it wasn’t for him, I probably wouldn’t be here right now, talking to you.

August 2013: Group members identified applications for practice and next steps

September 2013: Group members prepared write-ups for the principles

October 2013: Reviewed revised write-up of principles and started to word-smith principle statements
9 evidence-based, guiding principles to help youth overcome homelessness

The principles begin with the perspective that youth are on a journey; all of our interactions with youth are filtered through that journey perspective. This means we must be trauma-informed, non-judgmental and work to reduce harm. By holding these principles, we can build a trusting relationship that allows us to focus on youths’ strengths and opportunities for positive development. Through all of this, we approach youth as whole beings through a youth-focused collaborative system of support.

1. Journey Oriented. Interact with youth to help them understand the interconnectedness of past, present and future as they decide where they want to go and how to get there.

2. Trauma-Informed. Recognize that all homeless youth have experienced trauma; build relationships, responses and services on that knowledge.

3. Non-Judgmental. Interact with youth without labeling or judging them on the basis of background, experiences, choices or behaviors.
4. Harm Reduction. Contain the effects of risky behavior in the short-term and seek to reduce its effects in the long-term.

5. Trusting Youth-Adult Relationships. Build relationships by interacting with youth in an honest, dependable, authentic, caring and supportive way.

6. Strengths-Based. Start with and build upon the skills, strengths and positive characteristics of each youth.

7. Positive Youth Development. Provide opportunities for youth to build a sense of competency, usefulness, belonging and power.

8. Holistic. Engage youth in a manner that recognizes that mental, physical, spiritual and social health are interconnected and interrelated.

9. Collaboration. Establish a principles-based youth-focused system of support that integrates practices, procedures, and services within and across agencies, systems and policies.

Principles developed by the
Homeless Youth Collaborative on Developmental Evaluation:
Avenues for Homeless Youth; Catholic Charities (Hope Street);
Face to Face (Safe Zone); Lutheran Social Services (StreetWorks Collaborative);
The Salvation Army (Booth Brown House); and YouthLink (Youth Opportunity Center).
Dec 2013: Principles adopted by the group

March 2014: Presented to the Trustees of the Otto Bremer Foundation

April 2014: Posted to the AEA365 blog and had 1500 hits within two weeks

May 2014: Check-in to see how agencies are using the principles

October 2014: Decided to expand the Collaborative and focus on principles-based outcomes
Key Points

• All of the principles were evidenced in the case stories, some more so than others

• The principles were inter-related and over-lapping

• Thinking about the opposite highlights how these principles are different than the traditional approach (ex: meeting youth where they are rather than where you think they should be)
Question 3: What are the implications for practice?

Working in a principles-driven way:

- takes time
- is non-linear
- is highly individualized for each person and context
- requires consistency of understanding and cohesiveness of implementation across multiple levels of the system
- requires high degrees of judgment and trust
Three needs were identified in the case stories:

1) learning to love and be loved
2) navigating complex family relationships
3) developing community connections and a sense of belonging
Across levels of the systems

- Staff to youth
- Staff to staff, within organizations
- Organizational programs, processes and procedures
- Across organizations
- Across systems
Implications for Policy Makers and Funders

Conceptualization of the problem: Individuals versus systems

Organizational relationships: Collaboration versus competition

Evidence: Randomized controlled trials versus rigorous localized evaluation and adaptation

Success: Linear and predictable versus complex and non-linear
Implications For Evaluation

Holistic
Engage and support mental, physical, spiritual and social health and as interconnected and interrelated

Trusting Youth-Adult Relationships
Be trustworthy by acting in a way that is caring, authentic, and supportive
